Loggers' Strike Deadlocked Says B.C. Chief Justice Sloan

VANCOUVER, May 27.—(CP)—Renewed efforts to effect a settlement in the 13-day old strike of 35,000 British Columbia loggers and sawmill workers were scheduled to begin at 2 p.m. today following Saturday's collapse of negotiations under government appointed mediator, Chief Justice Gordon M. Sloan.

IN THIS LATEST attempt to attain a solution, the commissioner proposes to hear the case in the International Woodworkers of America (CIO-CIOA) representatives and the company representatives and then make recommendations to the two parties "as a completely neutral party."

The strike began May 15 when original negotiations over union demands for an 18-cent hourly wage increase, 40-hour week and union security, collapsed.

The operators' side of the strike was represented by their representative, R. V. Stuart, have announced that they are "ready and willing" to produce lumber with the presentation of their case.

Schoolboy Hero In Near-Tragedy

WINNIPEG, May 27.—(AP)—A 14-year-old grade school student, William Foreman, yesterday was the hero in a near-tragedy when he rescued 22-year-old Betty Penhall from the waters of the Red River.

Mrs. Penhall dove into the water and came up downstream. Young Foreman noticed her thrashing about and went in after her. Describing the rescue, the boy said, "I saw her head sticking out of the water. I swam over to her and half-Nelson on me and then we both went down. I clouted her head and grabbed her by the hair."

Communists Lead In Czech Elections

PRAGUE, May 27.—(AP)—The Communists emerged today as the strongest political party in Czechoslovakia on the basis of substantial returns from yesterday's parliamentary elections. They won a plurality in Prague. He said Russia could not agree to calling a formal 21-power peace conference until Big Four representatives reached preliminary agreement on treaty questions.

On the question of former Italian colonies, it was particularly obvious that American and British delegations usually cited an previous agreement, although this ran counter to the lawful interests of other countries, he said.

Trains Collide On Calgary Line

CALGARY, May 27.—(CP)—Three CPR trainmen were slightly injured, two freight engines turned over and two flat cars left the track in a collision of two freight trains at Didsbury, 50 miles north of here Sunday.

THE INJURED were all from Calgary. According to an eyewitness, the accident happened this way: The freight train, which was the "yard" switching and the end of backing onto a sidetrack, was in the yard when the other train, which was coming from the northbound "through" freight, arrived.

The freight in the yard, despite hurried attempt to clear the main track, was unable to get out of the yard in time. The engine and coal tender were still south of it when the engine from the northbound train arrived. The yard freight's engine toppled over on its right side down the tracks. The engine was "rammed into the air," he said.

"ALL OF THE MEN jumped before the engines struck," said Pedersen. "The engine and two flat cars left the track carrying steel barges and were thrown on their left side, with the nose of the north-bound engine stuck in the ground."

The barges, they were going to the north country, I guess, were not hurt, but now they are just a mass of twisted steel," he said.

U.S. Strike Legislation Termed 'Slave Labor Under Fascism'

MR. GREEN declared in a statement that the AFL will resist the legislation, already passed by the House of Representatives and now before the Senate, "to its last breath."

The measure requested by President Truman at a joint session of Congress Saturday, Mr. Green said, "ranges the government on the side of private industry against labor."

Suspend Ceilings On Top Grade Beef

OTTAWA, May 27.—(CP)—In an effort to facilitate movement of cattle and provide a better beef supply during the present seasonal shortage, wholesale price ceilings on the two top grades—red and blue brand—beef will be temporarily suspended from May 27 to July 20, the Prices Board announced last night.

The suspension will not increase prices to consumers, as retail ceilings remain unchanged.

A BOARD OFFICIAL, explaining the order, said it is expected the move will result in a freer movement of cattle which have in some instances been held back by feeders. Some "squeeze" might be felt by the retailer, but it is believed, will be willing to accept a lower mark-up on beef in order to obtain supplies.

Ceiling prices at both wholesale and retail of all grades and quality of cattle beef will be lifted, and red and blue beef will remain unchanged.

Beef Bringing Higher Prices

Top qualities of beef cattle were bringing higher prices on Alberta markets on Monday as a result of the announcement that the ceiling on wholesale prices on "red" and "blue" quality beef was to be lifted.

PROTESTS and a general withholding of cattle from the markets followed the lifting of the ceiling by packing plants in April that prices of live cattle were to be held down. The lifting of the ceiling will permit the packing plants to operate at a profit. Previous to that time top-grade calves were being sold at 13 cents and more a pound, but when the reduction in price took place, the calves were being sold at 10 cents and more a pound.

It is to meet the slump in cattle deliveries which normally occurs at this time of year, the government has lifted the price ceilings on the top quality grades of beef.

Russ See Muskox Military Planning

MOSCOW, May 27.—(CP)—Recent United States and Canadian expeditions to the Arctic—in particular the Canadian Army's "Operation Muskox" and the North Atlantic cruise of the United States aircraft carrier Midway—today were denounced as military rather than scientific ventures by Vladimir Oehersky, writing in Red Fleet. "Their researchers are not pursuing the aim of cultivation of the Arctic in the interests of the prosperity and welfare of humanity, but military and strategic aims," he said. "Such unexpected interest of the United States in the Arctic undoubtedly is a link in the chain of the post-war policy of certain circles in the United States."

lives that it is instructed to "proceed to the hearing and present its case."

A FOUR-DAY attempt to reach a settlement through round table negotiations presided over by the chief justice collapsed Saturday. The new phase may last a week before it is known whether success will be reached. In Victoria, Chief Justice Sloan said he expected it would take "two or three days" in presentation of cases by both parties, and then he probably would have recommendations to make within 24 hours.

He added that the parties could then have 24 to 48 hours depending on what they thought necessary to make up their minds.

The findings of the commission will not be binding on either party. The move will differ from earlier attempts at settlement in that the recommendation of the commissioner will not be sent to the federal labor minister but will be given to the contending parties so that either side can accept or decline.

of congress Saturday evidently made a little impression on senate critics of the president's plan. They were in a mood to take their time. The fundamental objection urged by opponents was summarized by Senator Robert Taft (Rep.-O.) who said the powers which would be vested in the president are too sweeping.

EVEN BEFORE Mr. Truman could return to the White House after addressing an extraordinary joint session of Congress Saturday the bills he urgently recommended were introduced in both House and Senate.

From the House speaker's rostrum, Mr. Truman sternly demanded authority to draft into the armed forces all workers on strike against the government, coupled with this power which he frankly conceded was drastic, the president asked a six-month temporary statute providing criminal penalties against employers and union leaders where presidential request for men to return to work in major industries is ignored.

In the course of his message to the joint session, Mr. Truman announced that the rail strike had been settled on the government's terms. Loud cheers greeted his words.

MR. TRUMAN said the right of employees to strike against private employers should be preserved. But he declared a long-range labor policy should be worked out by a joint house-senate committee, to see what can be done about reducing strikes against private enterprise.

Mr. Truman said the temporary legislation should be passed.

1. Authorize institution of injunctive or mandatory proceedings against any union leader, forbidding him from encouraging or inciting members of the union to leave their work or to refuse to return to work. It also would subject them to contempt for failure to obey any order of the court made in such proceedings.

2. Deprive workers of their seniority rights, who without good cause, persist in striking against the government.

3. Provide criminal penalties against employers and union leaders who violate the provisions of the act.

him authority to order the arrest of recalcitrant strike leaders and draft their followers into the United States Army.

BEFORE SEEING the President yesterday Mr. Lewis met for 1½ hours with Interior Secretary Krug and Vice Admiral Ben Morell, who are operating the seized mines for the government.

The number of mines down the government's offer to Mr. Lewis on Saturday, but what it contained with regard to his main demand for a health and welfare fund, higher pay and shorter hours and unionization of mine foremen was not disclosed.

Mr. Lewis turned down the offer, and yesterday's evidently futile meetings followed.

THE END of the 48-hour railroad strike came with dramatic suddenness three minutes before the 3 p.m. MDT deadline Saturday which Mr. Truman had set for the army to start running the trains. It came when the brotherhood heads, capitulating on the terms Mr. Truman proposed last Wednesday.

The compromise called for a 16-cent-an-hour pay increase recommended by a presidential fact-finding board plus additional 2½ cents an hour in lieu of any working rules changes for a year. The 16-cent retroactive to Jan. 1, the additional 2½ cents retroactive to May 22.

Calvert's ideals of unity have been shared by all men of vision since Calvert's time. Today ... let each of us be a man of vision ... let us work earnestly for a united Canada.

The Majority Must Rule

Canadians have reason to share in some degree the satisfaction of their neighbors at the resumption of railway service in the United States. Just as they also have reason to hope that the coal mines there will get back into operation quickly. The stoppage of the railway service halted trade between the two countries and in time ways have reacted in many ways to hamper industry and disturb living conditions in Canada.

There is cause for relief also that the national authority did not have to do more than assert its intent to function, in order to break the railway deadlock. As President Truman told Congress, no group or combination of groups could be permitted to set the Government at defiance. If that were allowed government itself would have been "brought down", and the country lapse into anarchy.

This of course is as true of the tie-up in the coal mines as of the paralysis of the railways. The Government had seized both, and in each case the work stoppage thereupon ceased to be a "last resort" of the owners and became resistance to the public authority. It cannot be supposed the miners will do other than follow the lead of the railwaymen and return to duty. Should they not do so a situation of anarchy would be created, and democratic government would be scoffed at by totalitarians everywhere.

The whole is greater than a part. The will of the nation must prevail if there is to be freedom and equal rights to all. Democracy could not live under group defiance of duly constituted authority.

The Public Should Be Told

There seems to be little doubt that most Canadians are quite willing to deny themselves certain kinds of food to relieve Europe's hunger. Unhappily, this humanitarian impulse is given little intelligent guidance by those in charge of the supplying Canadian food to the starving Europe.

Most people are aware that wheat flour is first on the list of foodstuffs to be conserved for this purpose. Very little, however, is being done to advise people as to the efficient conservation of wheat flour.

Similarly, nothing at all of any consequence is being done to guide Canadian consumers in the conservation of pork, which, it appears, is a highly important item of export to Great Britain. Who has been told, for instance, which cuts of pork or pork products are most urgently needed and most suitable for shipment overseas?

What is the situation in regard to beef? Is it being exported in quantity? If so, what cuts are best for shipment to Europe? Somebody in Ottawa should know the answers. And the Canadian people should know them too.

In short, if Canadians should eat sausages or pig's feet instead of picnic shoulders, beef stew or ox tongue instead of porterhouse roast or round steak, why doesn't somebody say so?

Canadians are perfectly willing to co-operate if they are given a plain, sensible and specific lead.

Russia Tackles Scarcities

The Soviet embassy at Washington is distributing a pamphlet which shows how the dearth of post-war supplies is being tackled in Russia. It is to be hoped the embassy has plenty of these booklets and will distribute them widely over this continent, especially in Canada.

Comrade Nikolai A. Voznesensky, chairman of the State Planning Commission, has just made a report to the Supreme Soviet on the Fourth Five-Year Plan. This report is embodied in the pamphlet now being circulated from Washington. He says the plan is to be carried out by increasing the capital equipment per worker and "the full utilization of the eight-hour working day."

The chairman promises wage increases, but these are to come out of increased production. "The average annual wages of workers and employees occupied in the national economy will grow by 25 per cent, and the growth of labor productivity, and in 1950 will surpass the 1940 level by 48 per cent."

One problem, it seems, is not troubling the Russians. That is the problem of adjusting money-wages so that every worker can take home as much pay for a short post-war week as he got for a long wartime week. There isn't going to be any short working week or short working day in Russia.

As for increased wages, that will come out of increased production, and the pay-increase will grow with production-increase. Somehow this idea seems to be familiar. It used to be used in Canada. In fact, it has been current here every time the country enjoyed a period of marked advancement, with plentiful employment, general well-being, and a rising average standard of living. The Russians have something there. Maybe they stole it from us. We ought to steal it back.

Give June A Chance

Hon. James Gardiner is no dispenser of gloom. He would rather tell good news than bad, and rather not tell bad news at all unless he has to. So he kept to himself until Friday that the expenses of the federal agriculture department told him two weeks before that crop prospects in Canada were the poorest they had been at that time for 24 years.

He hastened to add, no one should jump to the conclusion that we are going to have the poorest crops in 24 years. If the West gets three good rains in June, properly spaced, it will grow a crop "in spite of everything that happened up to the present."

If this last is provoking, it is strictly in accord with history, as every westerner knows or should know. June makes the crops. Not independently of what may have happened before, but largely so. Largely enough to turn the "poorest" prospects into a good or even an exceptional harvest.

The point of the observation is that every person in Canada should be doing his best right now, in town and country, to give June a chance to work its miraculous productive powers on as large a scale as possible. Even June can't produce crops in fields and gardens unless seed has been put into the ground.

Council Will Wait and See

The Security Council is standing pat on the Iran question. The members voted—Mr. Gromyko absenting himself—to keep Iran's appeal for help on the agenda until they get a plain position statement from the Qavam government that the Red Army has left the country. In detail they want assurance that the army hasn't left a contingent dressed in Azerbaijan uniforms to hold that province against the national army. Hussein Ali, who was sent to Washington to tell the Council what Qavam wanted it to know but didn't dare say at Tehran, hinted at this possibility when he said the Red forces had instigated the trouble.

Whatever the Council may be able to do, or has been able to do, in response to Iran's appeal for intervention, it at least has tried to do something, and plans to keep on trying if necessary. Hence the subject will stay on the order paper. It may have to stay a long time, judging by the inconsistencies between the statements of Hussein at Washington and the jittery emanations from Prince Firouz at Tehran.

Whether or not it was so intended, the stay of Red troops in Iran beyond the treaty date, and while negotiations for oil concessions were being pressed, was and is a try-out of the resolution of the Security Council. If it ignored these irregular proceedings it might as well abdicate from its position as enforcer of international law. It didn't ignore them, and isn't ignoring them.

World confidence in the courage and fidelity of the Council should be strengthened by its refusal to back down in Iran. Small nations have been shown that their complaints will get full attention, and big ones that bullying, secrecy and evasion provide no alibi.

It is a matter of history that the day the Duke of Connaught arrived in Ottawa as Governor-General of Canada, the regimental band of the Governor-General's Footguards played "Alexander's Ragtime Band". Seems now like being thirty years too soon.

Buluways has become unexpectedly and through no desire on its part the centre of unusual interest to all British people. A little more than two years ago it was the chief kral of the old Lobengula and his dusky warriors. Then the irresistible Britisher stepped in, claimed it for his own, and fashioned and modelled it into the semblance of a motherland township with most of the concomitants that go to make up a civilized community. Now we are alarmed with the news that the Matabele have risen in force, and are irresistibly reminded of the struggle in the early part of the century between whites and kaffirs.

Today in Europe

By Randolph Churchill
Exclusive to The Edmonton Bulletin

PARIS—One of the key factors in French politics is neither a politician nor a party, but a book. Arthur Koestler's "Darkness at Noon" has recently been published in Paris under the title "L'Enfer et le Zero". It made a profound impression and has a notable effect in turning sentimental leftists against Communism.

France's leading right-wing publisher, Francois Mauriac, has gone so far as to express the opinion that Koestler's book, which gives an authentic account of the Russian state trials in 1935 and 1936, was the most decisive single factor in persuading the French people to vote "Non" in the constitutional referendum.

Like almost all other communist lies, paper is still in very short supply in France. The first edition of "L'Enfer et le Zero" was limited to 10,000 copies. French Communists were alarmed by the profound impression it created and sent emissaries to Calman-Lévy, publishers. The Communists stated they would regard it as a most unbecoming act if any more were printed. The publishers replied they thought one should not be afraid to publish anything they like. Despite the short shortage, they immediately produced a second edition of 20,000 copies.

IT SEEMS STRANGE to an Englishman or an American that a mere copy of one book could make such a revolutionary change in public opinion. But France is a country where intellectual influence, the public mind, is still in very short supply. A climate of opinion is thus produced which, in a country where politics are fiercely and intellectually discussed, quite quickly brings widespread change of view throughout all the educated classes, who number millions.

The way in which the war was dramatized, and still more, published as a war against Fascism, undoubtedly misled vast categories of human beings in all countries into the shallow conclusion that, since Communism was outwardly the foe of Fascism, the most effective way of defeating the latter was by embracing the former. Now people are beginning to realize that Communism is as deadly an enemy of freedom as is Fascism.

Hence the considerable religious revival which is a definite feature of French life. And the Protestant minority seems as active as the more numerous Catholic congregations. French soldiers who spent years in German prison camps seem to be among the most devout church-goers. Many of the modern generation, of course, have lost faith in religion and never recover it. They need some vigorous reassertion of the rights of man and the cause of freedom to become politically effective.

But it is apparent that the successful political leaders in the next few years in Europe will be those who can build a bridge between the Social-Christian Democrats and all other parties which would radical in their thinking, are still warmly attached to liberty.

Dynamism Would Help
Editor, Bulletin: What a strange contrast. The dynamic action for war—the apathy towards private enterprise might properly function—well the result that private enterprise is prevented from functioning properly anywhere. Supplies are tied up, and a situation is created which makes it impossible for anybody to do anything to help the little fellow.

Thank You
Editor, Bulletin: The Canadian Cancer Society of Edmonton wishes to thank your paper for the space given in connection with the recent successful campaign. Yours truly, P. M. HOLMES, Secretary.

Memorable Words
Editor, Bulletin: To students and admirers of the art of political oratory, May 13 was a notable date because it was the anniversary of two of the most famous wartime speeches of Prime Minister Winston Churchill.

On May 13, 1940, he delivered to the British House of Commons his peremptory "blood, sweat, toil, and tears" speech. On May 13, 1945, he delivered over the broadcast a panoramic survey of his whole term of office as war minister entitled "My Five Years as Prime Minister."

Referring to these and other speeches Lord Moran, personal physician to the Prime Minister, says in his new book "The Anatomy of Courage": "Winston Churchill will perhaps be remembered as the man who more than any other in the modern world expressed in majestic utterances the unconquerable spirit of a nation. I have been with him more than once when tidings were brought to him of shattering reverses and my heart has come to think of him as invincible."

Fortunately for posterity commercial photograph companies in Great Britain have conserved in records the fire and eloquence with which these famous war speeches of Winston Churchill were delivered. A series of nine records now available commercially contains the whole of his war speeches of the summer of 1940; while a smaller series of three records contains the speech of a year ago on "My Five Years as Prime Minister." Dorothy Dix Says:

DEAR DOROTHY DIX—I am 21 years old. Married to a man I love but he gives me some unhappy moments. If I am sick, he doesn't sympathize with me. He never remembers my birthday or any anniversary. If I give him his own way in everything, he is all right. If I don't, he accuses me of pushing him around.

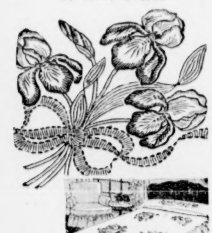

HE HAS been married twice before and so have I. We have been married one year and three months, which is longer than I was married to either one of my other husbands, and we spent the time fighting and fussing over nothing. What should I do? Should I leave him?

D.W. Answer: Apparently neither you nor your husband are good matrimonial material. Certainly to have had three husbands before you were 20 years old and not to have one of your marriages last but little over a year, must establish some sort of a record, and suggest to you that domesticity is not up your alley.

INASMUCH as swapping mates does not seem to have been successful in your case, for evidently your new husband is no easier to get along with than the old ones.

Bridge

By William E. McKenney

In the recent world championship Masters' Individual Tournament, Morris Ellis, an ex-service man, came close to upsetting the precedent that no players have ever won this title twice. Ellis won in 1940, and this year finished second, six and one-half points behind Robert McPherson.

Ellis liked today's hand best of all those in the individual. Five clubs looks like a difficult contract with so many aces and kings in the North-South hands. Ellis (East) ruffed the first diamond and had to select his line of play. If he tried to ruff out the spades, he was sure that the opponents would win the first spade lead and return a club. Deciding to play South for the king of clubs, he led the queen and took the finesse, then led the jack of clubs. Next he cashed the ace of hearts and played a small heart to the queen. When North and South followed, he cashed dummy's ace of clubs. Thus Ellis made six club tricks and five heart tricks for his contract.

MONTRÉAL, May 27.—D. L. Howard of Winnipeg, assistant manager of the Canadian Pacific Railway's communications department, has been named assistant general manager at head office here, succeeding W. M. Thompson, who is retiring on pension after 44 years with the company, the last four of them as assistant general manager.

Why Grow Old?

If you want your hands to be as beautiful as Actress Leza Holland's, follow Josephine Lowman's advice today. Even if you do your own work, it is possible to have lovely nails.

By Josephine Lowman
WE MUST CAST a glance at the past in order to discover the ancestor of the modern manicure, and the pride in the long finger nail. Egyptian ladies used a primitive kind of paint on their nails and also whitened their hands with chalk. Cleopatra dyed her nails henna. During the reign of the Chinese empire, fashionable nails were worn very long and were encased in gold. This showed that the owners belonged to the aristocracy and did not have to work with their hands. Today even those ladies who do a great deal of work with their hands manage to keep them lovely and soft; with beautifully manicured fingernails.

THE CONDITION of your nails not only indicates the fastidiousness of your grooming but shows us much about your general condition. Calcium and vitamin D deficiency can cause your nails to split. Nervousness is often connected with white spots and blue nails make us suspect poor circulation.

Even though you have manicures done at your beauty salon there are times when you must give yourself one, or repair the job. One widely-known cosmetic house has outlined a simple home manicure and I thought you might be interested in it.

1. Remove old lacquer thoroughly with polish remover. Press the cotton, soaked in the remover, on the nail long enough to loosen the polish before you begin wiping it off. File and shape the nails, using the coarse side of an emery board. The file should never touch the skin above the nail. Use the fine side of the emery board to level the nail edge.

2. REMOVE EXTRA cuticle with a cotton tipped orange stick which has been dipped in remover. Work the stick about the edge of the nail very gently. Use this stick to remove remaining bits of dirt under the nail tip. Never cut your cuticle. You will not have hang nails if you will push the cuticle back and wipe away surplus skin every time you take your hands out of water.

4. Apply cuticle oil.

5. Scrub your hands in soapy warm water. Dry thoroughly and then go over the nails again with polish remover.

6. Apply a polish base coat and let it dry well.

7. Apply your favorite shade of lacquer. You should apply the polish with sure quick strokes. Apply the first coat to the fingers of both hands thus giving time for the first coat of lacquer to dry before applying the second. Use an orange stick to remove any lacquer which has run into the crevices at the side of the nail and always remove a hairline tip on each nail.

8. Last apply the finishing transparent liquid layer to help check chipping. In this way you seal the lacquer on.

ONE EXPERT has told me that one of the reasons for chipping is the remaining bit of oil on the nails before the polish is applied. I imagine that this last protective colorless coat is also a great help. The trick of removing a hairline tip on each nail will help avoid chipping.

If you wish to have my hand exercises send a stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request for leaflet No. 12 to Josephine Lowman in care of this newspaper. Released by The Register and Tribune Syndicate, Inc.

MANUFACTURERS PLAN AHEAD!

The war was still on when the survey of the post-war spending plans of some 2,000 Canadian manufacturers was published. But, even then, they had their plans for peace.

They planned, for example, to spend about $230 millions "for additional machinery, maintenance, etc., . . . and about $95 millions "for expansion and modernization of plant and buildings" . . . in the first three years after victory. That was a collective estimate—and the majority of them were little businesses.

For more than 90 years the Bank of Toronto has participated in this type of purposeful planning by small as well as large enterprises. Credit itself is an essential form of industrial machinery. So it is that our credit plans are designed to meet the credit needs of all constructive business . . . furthering such plans as you, too, may have in mind. We cordially invite you to bring your credit needs to us.
